THE CLASS OF FIFTY-THREE

By James Seigel

It surely is true, I know you'll agree
There's never been a finer class than that of fifty-three
Not a Red-Devil Class even close to the same,
So pay close attention as I list them by name.

Class leaders are special, but ours were the smartest:
Reynolds, Copeland, Funke, and Don Johnson, the artist.
Richardson, Minard, Baxter, and Sharon Rainier
Received outsanding grades, with honors each year.

With Armstrong, Aschleman, Barnhart, and Bauer;
We're not looking at weeds, but clearly a flower.
Then there was Blevins, and Boger, and little Bryce Brown;
You can tell that this class was the toast of the town.

Jim Capen, Jack Covell, Cassleman, and Cox;
Ladies flowing with grace, and men strong as an ox.
Delagrange, Eberly, Ellis, and Gerig,
This class is still known for its care and its sharing.

Harry Gorrell and the Gouveias (there were two);
Not a thing many say, this class couldn't do.
Larry Griffith, Jewell Hall, and Dan Hardenbrook;
This class for sure has a really great look.

Next come Hartman, Hinschlager, and Bob Hathaway;
Our class graduation, the twentieth of May.
Dave Houghton, Don Immel, and Ardella James;
In the four years it's true, we won lots of games.

Marilyn Kail, Johnny Kleeman, Knisely, and Klink,
Beverly Leas, Joan Lett, not one, but two Links.
Longaker and Manon, Maurer, Nugen, and Ort;
Some classmates were taller, some plump, and some short.

Lyle Ott, Grace Palumbo, Perkins, and Potter;
Other classes were hot, but this class was hotter.
Add Purdy and Quance, Larry Rank and Joyce Rohm;
To beat fifty-three, you would have to go some.

Betty Roth and Jim Seigel, Shoudel, Barbara Shook;
This class, all agree, had a marvelous look.
Don Souder, Ginny Walters, and now add Neal Trout;
This class is a winner; there's really no doubt.

Jan Weinert, Mary Wyne, Wolff, Worm, Marilyn West;
We would have to agree, they're simply the best.
Please share this with others, it really is legal;
And by all means explain, it was written by Seigel.

Introduction

The committee takes this opportunity to welcome you, the best class ever to our 55th class reunion. We hope you take this time to renew old friendships and reminisce about the "the good old days."

The Early History of Auburn, Indiana

The honor of locating and being the first settler of Auburn falls to Mr. Wesley Park. In February 1836, after having made a visit to South Bend, Indiana, Mr. Park set out from his old home in Licking County, Ohio, with a drove of cattle and a load of dried fruits for a new home in Indiana. Arriving at Lima, Ohio, he sold out, and accompanied by John B. Howe, started for the center of a new county intent upon securing a site for a county seat.

After a mishap in crossing Pigeon River, they came at dark to Section 13, Township 34, Range 13, an area which is now known as Union Township. They made a fire and laid down, having their rifles ready at their sides, as the woods rang with the continued howling of wolves. "After hunting a day" for the best site, says he, "I decided upon the piece of land where Auburn now stands."

Having entered the land, the town was laid out, a shanty of ten feet by twelve feet was put up, and a road cut to Pleasant Lake. A milk cow, a yoke of oxen, and a cart of goods were brought through.

After two trials, Park succeeded in getting to Fort Wayne for supplies. The first attempt landed him at Blair's Mill. After getting the supplies, Mr. Park set up a tavern in his shanty, did his own cooking and was crowded with travelers and men who sought his services in showing them eligible land to enter. Continuing to act as an innkeeper and guide to the land hunters, he erected an 18x20 foot cabin, which stood a storey and a half high. It stood near the old water saw mill on the Michael Kline property.

Park returned to Ohio and brought his wife, Sophia, and their son, Amos B. Park, to Indiana. Park was accompanied by Lancelot Tugman and family. They arrived back in Auburn on August 6, 1836.

In the winter of 1836, the act which organized the land as Dekalb County was passed by the legislature. There seemed an active competition for the county seat between Messers Rogers and Hamilton, and Messers Park and Howe. The former parties bought land known as the old William Sherwood. Arnold Blodget and John Mosier purchased land in the exact center of the county. They laid out a town plot, staked off lots, and gave their site the name of Centerville.

The site which was controlled by Park and Judge John Howe of Lima became the county seat. Wesley Park was appointed Sherriff. As Sherriff, Park was granted the authority to determine the place for elections in the new precincts, and to receive and forward returns. Auburn became prominent as the county seat, whereas Centerville was never built up, and served simply as good farm land.

There seems to be no authentic reason or information set down in any of the county, state, or city records concerning the origin of Auburn's name. Talking to our very venerable and respected old settler Mr. McIntosh, he said "that this privilege was accorded to Mr. Wesley Park, who chose Auburn as the name." When asked why this particular name was selected, he said, "I cannot say," but an idea of it is that he either named it after Auburn, New York, or chose it because of Goldsmith's poem in which he says: "Sweet Auburn, the loveliest village of the plains..."

The first election was held in the winter of 1836-1837. Two voting places were opened in the county: one at Newville and the other on Fish Creek. John P. Widney, accompanied by S.W. Widney, carried the returns from the river poll to the county seat. The vote of the two precincts numbered thirty, and was duly certified by the governor.

The first jail was the upper room of Wesley Park's cabin. The lower room was the court room. Court always adjourned at meal time. A prisoner ascended a ladder to the jail and was told to stay there. The ladder was taken away and none ever escaped. If we stop for a minute and let our imagination have sway we may get a vague idea of a court house such as this, set out in the woods, then, the comparison that we draw between the first court house and the magnificent structure we pride so highly now is very striking, indeed.

An interesting incident happened one day. Mr. Bashford was on trial before Judge Yates, who had been partaking too freely of the Indians' firewater. The judge sentenced Mr. Bashford to the whipping post and "allowed as how he intended to see the punishment inflicted if he had to do it himself." He immediately proceeded to carry out the sentence when Wesley Park, the Sherriff, grabbed him and whirled him around, telling him if he didn't go back and take his seat, he would be put up the ladder. Whereupon the authority of the Sherriff was recognized and court adjourned in a peaceful manner.

On the erection of a school house, the court house was moved thither. In this building, heated by a dilapidated stove, a rough platform of boards was built at the end and designated the "bench", and a space was fenced in with rough boards and dignified the bar.

The first real jail was built from the proceeds of the sale of one third of Mr. Park's lots, which he donated to the county. It was located on Jackson Street on the old William Keagy lot. It was erected in 1838 and constructed of hewed logs and built by Mr. B. Bunnell.

In building the first Court House, bids were called for. Mr. J.R.Casper bid $1,450, but this was thought to be too high. Mr. Hite, a carpenter southeast of town, took the contract for $800.

The first Main Street is what is now known as Cedar Street, and the present Main Street was known as the Coldwater Pike.

Park and Ogden built a saw mill in 1837. Park gave a lot to each person who would settle there. L. Tugman was the second man to build a cabin; his cabin stood near the Ehler property. John Coburn put up the third. Riley Jacobs and Thomas Freeman were other notable pioneers.

The first store was opened by a man named Comstock with a stock valued at $170. Among the other pioneer businessmen were the names of Freeman, Payne, Wallace, and Samuel Ralston. Many stores and grocery stores were opened and run in the early days of the settlement.

Thus was the early history of Auburn. In every matter of importance, we see the name of Wesley Park standing prominent in the foreground. He was a determined, hard working and earnest man, and can easily be considered the father of our city.

In 1841, Auburn had 72 inhabitants. In 1849, there were 300 inhabitants. At the end of the Civil War, there were from six to seven hundred residents.

Twice, there was fear of Auburn losing the county seat. However, each time a rail line was introduced to the city. The railroads just touched Auburn's city limits, and in this way, Auburn retained the name of county seat, and also secured the L.S. and M.S and Vandalia Railroads. From this time on, our town prospered, and today we have the most wonderful and beautiful city in the county.

Auburn High School

On May 30, 1916, W.H. McIntosh gave a $10,000 site for the new high school. On August 24, 1920, the new McIntosh High School was completed at a cost of $165,000. McIntosh High School eventually became known as Auburn High School. The last class to graduate from Auburn High School was the Class of 1966. The Auburn Red Devils made their final appearance as an Auburn High School Basketball team on February 11, 1966, playing against Albion, Indiana. The Red Devils won.

The school was then used for a grade school and called McIntosh Grade School. The school was closed in 1997 and is now used for St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church office, CASE (Court Appointed Student Education), Adult Learning Center, Good Samaritan food and clothing, and the Alternative School. It is still being used as of 2008.

In Fondest Memory

Dedication from the 1953 Auburn High School Follies

To Jane Frank, whose memory is ever secure in our hearts, we wish to dedicate our annual. Although Jane's sudden leave-taking occurred after only two years at Auburn High, the memories of her gay smile and kind words will always remain with her classmates and all who knew her.
